

NATIONAL GRADUATE INSTITUTE
FOR POLICY STUDIES

GRIPS 2018-2019

Gateway to Global Leadership

Message from the President

The National Graduate Institute for Policy Studies (GRIPS), a graduate school established in 1997, aims to contribute to the development and advancement of democratic governance both in Japan and abroad through research and education in governmental policy and policy reform. Since its inception as the Graduate School of Policy Science at Saitama University in 1977, GRIPS has conducted policy research relevant to the current affairs of Japan and the world and provided graduate education in advanced policy studies designed primarily for mid-career administrative and government officials from Japan and overseas, primarily from developing countries. GRIPS places particular emphasis on education for our international students; many of our degree programs can be obtained through study entirely in English.

GRIPS endeavors to produce young policy-makers who can tackle problems faced by countries, cities, international organizations, companies, and civic society at large. To that end, graduate education at GRIPS focuses on the fundamentals of policy research as well as practical problem-solving. Students benefit from high-quality instruction in economics, political science, public administration, international relations, engineering, and other subjects, and from the examination of selected case studies reflecting the experiences of Japan and other Asian countries related to modernization, rapid economic growth, and disaster management. In addition to high-quality graduate education, we offer training programs that meet the needs of various stakeholders including the government agencies of a wide array of countries; we also accept funded research that draws on our faculty's expertise.

GRIPS' current policy on education, research and management is strongly linked to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in 2015. Our curriculum highlights the 17 goals of the SDGs: we work to raise the awareness and knowledge of the SDGs amongst our students—many of whom will go on to become future leaders of their countries. I am also keen on encouraging research that will contribute towards the achievement of the SDGs.

Currently, international students make up 60% of our student population. Even by global standards, we are a particularly international research and education institution. In this environment, international students have the opportunity to engage in friendly competition among themselves and with the people who will lead Japan in the future, whereas Japanese students have the chance to create bonds with those who will go on to be future leaders in their home countries around the globe.

GRIPS is centrally located in Tokyo and has extensive access to the Japanese government and its agencies and to other major stakeholders. This proximity allows our students to experience the core of Japanese policymaking as they perform their research.

The world in the 21st century faces a great number of urgent issues that require action on both national and international scales. These issues, reflected in the SDGs, impact on areas including economic development, security, the environment, overpopulation, inequality, and technological progress. I hope that you will choose to come to GRIPS and join us in addressing these global problems.

Akihiko Tanaka
President

Profile

Akihiko Tanaka obtained his Ph.D. in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1981 and has held various positions at the University of Tokyo, including Professor of International Politics, Director of the Institute of Oriental Culture, and Executive Vice-President. He served as President of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) from April, 2012, to September, 2015. Professor Tanaka's academic specialties include theories of international politics, development cooperation, contemporary international relations in East Asia, and Japanese foreign policy. In 2012, he received the Medal of Honor with Purple Ribbon (shiju hōshō) for his academic achievements. In April 2017, Professor Tanaka became President of GRIPS.

Meet Policy Professionals from Around the World

Many students at GRIPS are mid-career personnel from central and local government, related institutions and private companies. About 60% of the student body is composed of international students from nearly 60 countries and regions, many of whom are administrative officials in their own countries.

Our students have diverse nationalities, cultures, and languages, but they are all dedicated policy professionals. GRIPS is an environment where Japanese and international students can address the same problems in the same classroom, thinking about future policy from a global perspective.

Where are GRIPS Alumni working?

(Graduated 2017)

GRIPS attracts students from around the world in a variety of fields. Networks established during study are precious assets after graduation. Our graduates number over 4,500 and hail from 115 different countries and regions, including those from GRIPS's predecessor, the Graduate School of Policy Science (GSPS) at Saitama University.

Center for Professional Communication

The mission of the Center for Professional Communication is to support GRIPS' students, faculty, and staff in developing effective professional communication skills and competencies needed to communicate productively in an environment of multiple stakeholders. To this end, we offer a range of instruction and support in fundamental areas of professional communication in English and Japanese including policy paper writing, professional speaking, grant proposal writing, and digital communications. We also provide opportunities for cultural and academic exchanges through a self-access learning center, organize seminars and special events related to all aspects of professional communication, and prepare customized materials for students and staff on academic and professional writing and language learning.

Focused Knowledge of Policy Studies

Located in Roppongi, Tokyo, the GRIPS campus is close to Nagatacho and Kasumigaseki, the political and administrative centers of Japan respectively, making it easy for current administrative officers and practitioners to visit. Through lectures, seminars, the GRIPS Forum and other events, students have the opportunity to deepen their knowledge of policy studies by hearing from top-class experts on the front lines of domestic and international academia, government, politics and industry.

Soukairou Hall

Diversity and Depth of Teaching

Our faculty consists of leading scholars in policy studies from Japan and overseas, and highly gifted individuals with practical experience in government, international development and related fields. Together, they make a team of instructors with great diversity and depth.

We have 70 full-time and many part-time professors to our approximately 400 students. The curriculum includes discussions and tutorial classes with a small number of students, alongside regular lectures. Instruction is closely attuned to the needs of the individual student.

Short-Term Executive Training

GRIPS has been providing various short-term training programs for government officials, particularly for senior executives, middle management level officials and public policy professionals. The Executive Development Center for Global Leadership (CGL) is a well-established center for executive training, which was launched in 2013. The center has been organizing many short-term training programs to meet specific requests.

» Subjects of Short-Term Executive Training Program include:

- Leadership Development and Management for the 21st Century
- Public Management in General
- Structures and Processes of Government
- Organizational Management
- Civil Service Systems and Human Resource Management
- Tools of Government
- Legal Systems and Legislative Review
- Administrative Reform and Innovation
- Good Governance
- Trust in the Government
- Ethics and Anti-Corruption
- Local Governance in General
- Local Government Administration
- Local Government Financial Administration
- Management of Inter-Governmental Relations
- Public Policy Analysis
- Selected Substantive Policies

» Short-term training programs consist of various activities:

- Lectures by government officials, business executives, specialists from research institutions, as well as professors from GRIPS and other universities
- Field trips or visits to government offices and other places of interests related to themes of training
- Group discussions and workshops
- Participants' presentations and policy papers
- Exchanges with people from Japan

FOR POLICY STUDIES

Your Gateway to Global Leadership

GRIPS is a graduate school specializing in education and research for policy studies. The predecessor of GRIPS was the Graduate School of Policy Science (GSPS), which was established in 1977 at Saitama University as the first graduate school for policy studies in Japan. Established in 1997 by the Japanese government, GRIPS inherited the GSPS mantle and eventually moved to Roppongi, an international and cultural hub of Tokyo. GRIPS aims to produce first-class policy makers and conduct cutting-edge research in policy studies. Our slogan, "Gateway to Global Leadership," summarizes the mission of GRIPS: We seek to identify and nurture leaders and managers involved in policy-making on a global scale.

GRIPS is one of the most internationalized graduate schools in the world, with international students comprising nearly 66% of the student body. The class of 2016-2017, for example, which consisted of 421 students, included 279 foreign students from 62 countries. Most GRIPS students are professionals from central and local governments.

GRIPS has been a partner of the Asian Development Bank-Japan Scholarship Program (ADB-JSP) since 2000. In addition, GRIPS has been selected by the Japanese government and international organizations such as the World Bank, the World Customs Organization, and the International Monetary Fund to train mid-career government officials from emerging and developing countries.

2 GRIPS' Flagship Program

The Public Policy Program

The Public Policy Program (PPP) is GRIPS' flagship program and it has roots going back to the GSPS. The mission of the PPP is to educate leaders, public managers, and public policy analysts, providing them with the policy tools and ethical principles needed for democratic and efficient governance in the public policy arena. The PPP has produced a steady stream of highly qualified managers and leaders for many important areas of public policy. Graduates of this program become part of an international network of policy professionals.

Director:
Makoto Tanaka
(Applied Economics)

The Public Policy Program has two tracks—a one-year track (MP1) and a two-year track (MP2). The working and teaching language of the PPP is English and all courses are offered in English.

The one-year master's program (MP1) equips mid-career managers and leaders with the fundamental skills and knowledge needed to make them effective managers in the public sector. Students develop familiarity with all phases of the policy cycle. The program awards the degree of Master of Public Policy or Master of Public Administration. Students are required to write a policy report in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree.

The two-year master's program (MP2) provides early- and mid-career professionals and junior staff members with the technical skills needed to be professional policy analysts. The program builds a strong foundation for advanced research (including doctoral studies). The program awards the degree of Master of Arts in Public Policy. Students are required to write a master's thesis in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree.

Program Design: Interdisciplinary Academic & Professional Education

The curriculum is composed of an introductory course in policy studies, policy debate seminars, and a wide variety of elective courses. All PPP students are provided a common interdisciplinary and analytical foundation through required courses. Students acquire more specialized knowledge by taking recommended courses. A wide range of elective courses enables students to enhance their academic and pragmatic skills. Practical courses are taught by government officials who have extensive experience in policy formulation and implementation. This combination of academic and practical knowledge is the hallmark of a GRIPS education.

Students are provided considerable guidance in the preparation of their policy reports. Students develop research skills, choose a research topic, and develop their policy reports in two policy debate seminars. The Center for Professional Communication (CPC) offers guidance and support at every stage of the writing process, from selecting a topic to writing the final draft.

In addition to the knowledge and skills acquired in the first year, MP2 second-year students receive advanced training and guidance in the technical and practical skills needed for public policy analysis. Students develop and apply their research skills to writing and defending compulsory master's theses. Thus, MP2 provides a strong platform for advanced policy research (including doctoral studies).

Faculty: Cutting-Edge Academic Research for Practical Policy Solutions

MP1 and MP2 are taught by full-time faculty as well as visiting lecturers. The core GRIPS faculty is composed of domestic and international scholars with solid academic backgrounds and outstanding publication records as well as practitioners with extensive experience in the civil service and public policy management.

Concentrations: Your Field of Study

Students can enroll in a wide variety of courses covering the social sciences, including economics, international relations, development policies, operations research, as well as their chosen fields for in-depth policy study. The PPP provides students with a choice of four concentrations (specialties): Economic Policy (EP), International Development Studies (IDS), International Relations (IR), and Public Policy (PP).

Economic Policy (EP) Concentration

The objective of the Economic Policy (EP) Concentration is to provide policy professionals with the skills needed to design and evaluate policy alternatives while emphasizing the application of economic tools to real-world policy problems. Students are strongly recommended to take core and applied courses in economics. Each student is required to produce a policy report/thesis, for which GRIPS faculty members will provide guidance and advice.

Associate Deputy Director and Concentration
Leader: Nobuhiro Hosoe
(Computational Economics)

Titles of Past Policy Reports and Theses

- Financial Development and Economic Growth in Developing Countries
- Non-Interest Income and Risk: The Empirical Evidence of Thai Commercial Banks
- Assessing the Impact of International Trade on Economic Growth: A Case Study of Ghana
- The Impact of Exchange Rate Movements on Foreign Direct Investment in Uganda
- The Impact of Monetary Policy towards Investment in Indonesia

International Development Studies (IDS) Concentration

The International Development Studies (IDS) Concentration aims to foster technical skills for solving development problems using economics as the basic tool. Specially designed for researchers and policy makers interested in development issues, the curriculum of this concentration covers a wide range of topics in development including gender, poverty, agricultural development, trade and industry, environment, and government and market.

Concentration Leader:
Jonna P. Estudillo
(Development Economics)

Titles of Past Policy Reports and Theses

- An Essay on the Evolution of Modern Rice Farming Systems in Asia
- Women in the Labor Market in Vietnam Since the Start of Doi Mo
- Is There a Difference in Outreach by the Legal Status of Microfinance Institutions?
- Nonfarm Sector Development and Women Empowerment in Bangladesh
- Contribution of Community Forestry to Sustainable Forest Management in Nepal

International Relations (IR) Concentration

The International Relations (IR) Concentration aims to foster the development of future policy leaders through intensive training in the methods and approaches necessary for understanding and solving major contemporary challenges in the world. We welcome students with interests in international affairs, covering a variety of issues from security to political economy, as well as those who wish to analyze domestic politics or political economy within the context of an individual country or from a comparative perspective. Both qualitative and quantitative methods can be adopted for analyses.

Concentration Leader:
Hyoung Kyu Chey
(International Political Economy)

Titles of Past Policy Reports and Theses

- Question of Existence: Rising Sea Levels in the Pacific and New Zealand Policy Options
- R2P in East and Southeast Asia
- Small States as Negotiators: A Comparison of Cambodia and Laos with Reference to the South China Sea Issue
- Ghana's Regional Integration Efforts in Africa: The Post-Nkrumah Era in Review
- Building Trust in the Relationship with China: From Vietnam's Perspective

Public Policy (PP) Concentration

The objective of the Public Policy (PP) Concentration is to provide students with knowledge of various policy issues from many different disciplinary viewpoints to support their understanding and investigation of policy-related problems. Students are required to write a policy proposal based on the application of either quantitative or qualitative analytical tools to a policy issue. In preparing policy reports, students should (a) collect quantitative and/or qualitative data, (b) analyze the data, and (c) write a policy proposal based on their investigation.

Concentration Leaders:
Tatsuo Oyama
(Operations Research)

Titles of Past Policy Reports and Theses

- Public Service Reform Programme in Tanzania

State Counselor, Office of the Prime Minister of the Republic of Macedonia

Studying at the National Graduate Institute for Policy Studies was a life changing experience for me from many viewpoints. First and foremost, it enabled me to grow academically, and learn many new aspects of policy making and implementation that had been missing in my prior education. Then, it allowed me to get acquainted with Japan, one of the most exiting places in the world, rich with both tradition and modern life. Finally, graduating from GRIPS turned out to be the key asset for career advancement that brought me to the next level within the public institutions of my country. I warmly recommend taking up studies at GRIPS to any public service professional.

Edward Tenywa (Uganda, 2011) One-year Master's Program of Public Policy

Personal Assistant to Deputy Governor, Governor's Office, Bank of Uganda

Further advancement of my central banking career required the search for breadth and depth of theoretical and practical knowledge in economics and public policy. The selfless and dedicated staff, the multidisciplinary approach to studies and multicultural environment at GRIPS, all ensured that I got more than I had envisaged. This life defining and changing experience was truly my gate way to institutional and global leadership.

Marcelo Echague Pastore (Paraguay, 2013)

Two-year Master's program of Public Policy

Director, Economic Studies and Financial Analysis, Securities and Exchange Commission of Paraguay

The discovery of GRIPS was a great joy, as it offers programs that are very inter-disciplinary in their scope, by mixing Economics, Political Science, International Security Studies, and so on. Moreover, this university also proved to be extremely international, enabling me to interact and exchange experiences with people that I would certainly not easily meet in other parts of the world. Studying at GRIPS has also been extremely positive in terms of learning, by giving me the chance to take leadership roles such as within the International Student Council, together with the numerous invitation to several high-level discussions, meetings and panel debates with top professionals in their fields, including public servants, academics, and executives from the private sector. Such an experience has definitely been helpful in preparing me for my present and future endeavors. Honestly, I do not think I would have gotten my current job at the Securities and Exchange Commission of Paraguay if it was not for GRIPS.

Ugyen Wangchuk (Bhutan, 2014) Two-year Master's Program of Public Policy

Program Officer, Children Division, National Commission for Women and Children Royal Government of Bhutan

Greeting from Bhutan, the Lang Happiness! To be honest, initially for about few weeks I was literally feeling homesick wanting to go back to my country. With the support from the student office I slowly acclimatized myself into the system. Days, Weeks and Months passed and I started feeling like 'yes' this is the place I wanted to live and study. GRIPS, with lot of International Students and Japanese students is another beauty by itself. Where we get to know many friends across the world and knowing their culture has broadened my thinking and understanding of the Universe. The Professors are talented and full of knowledge and the most important was their willingness to help the student at any point of time. Faculties working in GRIPS were such a lovely person, making us feel like home. I say my two years stay in Japan had trained and prepared me both mentally and professionally to take up any responsibilities.

Keiko Fukumori (Japan, 2014) One-year Master's Program of Public Policy

Representative, Japan International Cooperation Agency Indonesia Office

GRIPS is a unique school with an excellent public policy and administration program. It offers not only theoretical studies but also various case studies from other countries, including developing countries, which are useful for actual work in business and administration. The learning environment at GRIPS is so international that you can forget that this is a school in Tokyo. You can take all your course in English and the program can be customized based on your personal interests. I focused on economics and econometrics, and I acquired many theoretical and analytical skills for public policy work. The student-faculty ratio is very good and you can ask the teacher to raise the level if you would like to learn more. Sharing such a unique and precious time in academics with people from various countries will surely be one of my lifetime treasures.

*The Public Policy Program was organized in 2010 into One-year Master's Program of Public Policy and Two-year Master's Program of Public Policy.

5 Admissions

The application procedure should be completed online by all candidates for MP1 and MP2. Applicants need to obtain an ID and Password prior to online application. The Online Entry Form and Online Application Form must be submitted by the appropriate deadlines. Details can be found at the GRIPS Admissions website: (<http://www.grips.ac.jp/en/admissions/index/>).

The online application process of GRIPS can be complicated and confusing because of varying requirements and policies for different programs and scholarships. The GRIPS Admissions Office will help you work through any problems you encounter.

Qualifications

Candidates must hold a Bachelor's degree from a recognized/accredited university and must satisfy the English language requirement with a minimum TOEFL score of 550 (iBT 79) or IELTS Academic 6.0. A record of solid academic performance at the undergraduate level is expected. Work experience in government or other policy-oriented institutions is highly desirable. Evidence of managerial experience and leadership potential are looked on very favorably, especially for MP1. Although there is no formal entrance exam, the Public Policy Program may administer special exams in such areas as English writing and mathematics proficiency. Telephone and video interviews may also be conducted. Some in-person interviews may be arranged if circumstances permit.

Funding Options

There are several ways to finance your education in the PPP. The traditional way is to obtain one of several scholarships allocated to GRIPS by various sponsoring organizations.

The two primary sources of funds are the Japanese Government (MEXT) and the Asian Development Bank (ADB). MEXT and ADB provide a fixed number of scholarships both for MP1 and MP2. Candidates who apply by the early application deadline (November) will be considered for one of these scholarships.

The choice of scholarship will be determined by GRIPS based on constraints imposed by the scholarship providers (see the GRIPS website for details).

Scholarships are allocated on a competitive basis from the pool of early applicants.

Self-financing, including all externally acquired funds, is another option. Since GRIPS is a Japanese national university, our tuition and fees are very low and quite competitive on an international basis. This is particularly true given the high quality of our education and other services. As a consequence, an increasing number of candidates apply to GRIPS with their personal funds or with scholarships obtained from external sources such as their home governments or non-governmental organizations.

Student Support and Resources

One unique aspect of GRIPS is our extensive support system for assisting students in their daily living. We consider this aspect of your lives to be every bit as important as your academic life, especially for foreign scholars unfamiliar with Japan. As international students have comprised, on average, about 60% of the GRIPS student body over the last 10 years, we have developed comprehensive services to assist students in their day-to-day living.

The Student Office organizes orientation programs for incoming students and assists arriving international students in getting organized and settled in Japan. It also organizes a number of social events and activities, including field trips and Japanese cultural experiences. The Student Office also functions as a hub to promote meaningful interaction and understanding between Japanese and foreign nationals.

Faculty

GRIPS has approximately 80 full-time faculty members from a variety of backgrounds. Many of them have served as central and local government officials, diplomats, bankers or business executives. This enables an effective combination of rigorous academic courses complemented by professional expertise and experience.

For more on our faculty members, please see <http://www.grips.ac.jp/en/about/directory/>
